Christopher J. Christie is serving his second four-year term as the chief federal law enforcement officer in New Jersey. Known to be “the toughest and most aggressive corruption buster the state has seen in years,” he has a remarkable track record since being appointed to his position in December 2001.

Christie has gained great recognition for cracking down on corrupt politicians and prosecuting nearly 100 political figures of both party affiliations and various ranks. His team has taken on major corporations such as Bristol-Myers Squibb and large educational institutions like the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, investigating instances of alleged embezzlement and falsification of documents.

Christie’s commitment to fighting corruption in both the political and corporate sectors earned him the title of the 2006 New Jersey Law Journal’s Lawyer of the Year. He graduated from the University of Delaware with a bachelor of arts degree in political science in 1984 and from Seton Hall University School of Law with a juris doctor degree in 1987.

Christie was admitted to the bar of the state of New Jersey and the bar of the United States District Court, District of New Jersey, in December 1987. In 1987, he joined the law firm of Dughi, Hewit & Palatucci of Cranford, N.J. In 1993, Christie was named a partner in the firm. He specialized in securities law, appellate practice, election law, and government affairs.
